Purpose

We aim to preserve + 9,000 hectares of virgin forests in one of the most biodiversity hotspots in the tropical Andes of the region.

Since 2007, this project located in Camanti - Cusco; with the collaboration of professionals from different specialties and supported by the Peruvian State, seeks conservation through the execution of programs interested in scientific research, social participation, environmental education and ecotourism. The purpose of this project is to help mitigate the negative impact of human activity on the forest, protecting and restoring its natural balance and well-being.

Conservation

We are convinced that in order to generate well-being we must combine conservation efforts with social and economic development. Our work focuses on (1) put in value the benefits of the forest, in order to (2) exploit them in a sustainable manner, generating a harmonious relationship between people and nature.

(1) Research

We seek to value the benefits of the forest, and its relationship with people, from research projects led by specialists in various fields: biologists, botanists, anthropologists, economists, architects, etc.

(2) Ecotourism

We offer unique experiences of natural re-connection to all those who look for adventure, rest, science, mysticism and more. Everyone who visits SOQTAPATA become an essential part of the conservation of forests and the development of their influence zone.

Natural Connection

We have designed a retreat away from the distractions of the city, in the middle of a forest of millenary trees, so that everyone has the opportunity to connect with himself through nature.
